Adam Dixon Warner Gives a Forceful Lecture on Civic Vice at Y. M. C. A.

IMPROVEMENT IS NEEDED

IN PLACE OF PRIZE FIGHT.

For an hour yesterday afternoon Adam Dixon Warner of Los Angeles held the fixed attention of an audience that filled the assembly room and crowded the corridors of the Y. M. C. A. building. Mr. Warner delivered his lecture on "The Modern City," which was in effect an arraignment of the iniquities of the present day civic governments.

Mr. Warner is an oretor of unusual mr. Wa

ent day civic governments.

Mr. Warner is an orator of unusual magnetic force. He is of the Bryan and La Foliette type, and combines with his forceful and convincing manner of delivery of his arguments, a thorough grasp of facts of existing conditions. A lawyer by profession, he has made a study of civic governments for the last twenty years. His was a total of comparisons and holding to the light vivid word pictures of graft and municipal corruption. He said in part, keep the modern city clean. A city will be good and clean just as its men and women—its society, is good and clean and great. By society I mean each and every individual and unit. It is you and it is I.

"To govern a modern city is a very different thing from governing the cities of the past. They were mere provinces with a frugal population scattered over great areas, with diversified and fixed places of abode, while our modern cities are the dumping grounds for the Slav, the Hindu, Italian and Yiddish pauper labor brought to this country by the steamship lines owned and dominated by the 'interests,' in contrast to the splendid type of Scandinavian, Irish or German who, a few years ago, came to acquire homes.

City Will Dominate.

City Will Dominate.

"The city of today dominates the country. For the first time in the history of the country, the next census will show a majority population in the cities. In them are the newspapers, the colleges, the schools of arts and sciences, the great teachers and preachers, and the theatres teachers and preachers, and the theatres of action and inaction; the places of amusement and instruction, and the places of degredation and destruction. And they are all dominated by one great force, one that steals through special privileges and returns through colleges, universities and civic control. Disguise as we may, such is the character of our cities today.

"I make the bold statement that there is not a city in the United States that is free from graft in its civic government. The promotion and over-capitalization of public service corporations is graft.

"The court records of our cities disclose not only the necessity of absolute control of public utilities, but disclose the necessity of some control over the ordinary business transactions of men to insure horsest and source declines. Some men honest and square dealings. Some men say that you cannot make a man honest by law. That may be literally true, but you can prevent him from being too dishonest. You can scare dishonesty into

Must Make Changes.

"Until you remove the saloon from your best business corners and best business streets, where your sons and daughters are forced to run the gauntlet of moral depravity, and displace them with moral influences; until you stop putting 50 to 100 gin mills on your best business thoroughfares, until you stop masquerading as a Christian gentleman on Sunday and as a Christian gentleman on Sunday and voting for that increased rent from the bawdy house on Monday; until you remove the death houses from the streets and put a few places of pleasant recreation and amusement for the young men and young women in their stead; until you change that poker room or bridge room into a quiet devotional room, where you can take that how or girl and sit you can take that boy or girl and sit down by his or her side like a brother; until you quit ringing up that telephone and asking Jack, or Tom or Billy to bring up a flask in the afternoon before the old man comes home, you will have rotten cities and rotten government and rotten homes.

"I see by your press that a number of your business men are reputed to have reised $100,000 to get a big double-fisted negro and a burly, bruising boilermaker to give an exhibition of what they call science to advertise your city. It is such things that have degraded the citizenship of our cities until today the licentiousness of American cities is as bad as that of the ancient cities of Sodom and Gemorrah, Babylon, Ninevah and Tyre, Rome and the modern Paris. I think I could show you things in iniquity in the cities of San Francisco, New York and Chicago that they never even dreamed of in olden times.

The principles of character and the standards of character and the standards of moral measurement which appeared in John Brown become the possession of beings like you and me."

that they never even dreamed of in olden times.

"I want to make this suggestion to you young men — what an advertisement it would be to the world if tomorrow morning the Associated Press would announce that 250 young men of the city of Salt Lake, a garden spot of the world, would go as a committee to the Commercial club of Salt Lake and say: 'Gentlemen, some men have raised $100,000 for a prize fight. We want you to raise $100,000 for an club of Salt Lake and say: 'Gentlemen, some men have raised $100,000 for a prize fight. We want you to raise $100,000 for an aviation week, which would be truly a scientific week, and we want one similar to that contemplated in New York and Chicago. Or we suggest that you give $100,000 to erect an observatory on Ensign peak, that could be an adjunct of the university, and would rival even the little town of Flagstaff, Ariz.' That would be a true advertisement for your city."

Mr. Warner's lecture was preceded by the usual Sunday afternoon program, consisting of musical selections and seriptural lesson.

Unitarian Pastor Preaches on the Significance of John Brown.

SLAVERY OF PRESENT DAY

MANY ARE UNMINDFUL OF INDUSTRIAL BONDAGE.

Taking as his text a quotation from Lowell, "Truth forever on the scaffold. Wrong forever on the throne," the Rev.

Wrong forever on the throne," the Rev. William Thurston Brown spoke in the Unitarian church Sunday morning on "The Moral Significance of John Brown." He sald in part:

"The fact of all others best worth knowing is that the same drama that was on the stage fifty years ago, in which John Brown had the immortal honor to play a hero's part, is still on the stage. Not for a moment has that act ceased. It was not John Brown that was on trial in Virginia fifty years ago—it was what he stood for that was on trial. It was truth, love, honor, justice, religion, that was on trial. The issue was between law on the one side and love on the other; the nation on one side and justice to a race of men on the other; custom on one side and considerate on the other; That is the stage of the state.

In the Rev. Will be done early this week.

Dr. Young, with the aid of the assistants whom he has been able to obtain, will continue his inspections of the sheep in the various districts, as rapidly as he has the opportunity. He has to make a trip to the Deep Creek country as soon as possible, to look into some reports of infection among animals, which have come from that neighborhood.

Good use has been made of the funds which were received by the Utah Wool Growers' association, from sheep men of the state, for the purpose of fighting the lip and leg disease among the sheep, and C. B. Stewart, secretary of the association, says conditions are reported to be improved. The same kind of reports have come to Dr. Young on the conditions through the state. the nation on one side and justice to a race of men on the other; custom on one side and conscience on the other. That is the perpetual drama of history, the only one it is best worth our while to see. It is the one drama we shall see in this world of ours, if we have anything of the spirit of that old hero. One kind of slavery is not better than another. This nation can no more escape moral by law. That may be literally true, but you can prevent him from being too dishonest. You can scare dishonesty into honesty by law.

"I say to you that you might as well try to dam up Niagara without stopping the supply of water as to stop graft without changing the conditions. If the city is rotten, then the majority of its citizens are rotten, or your government is a living lie.

of slavery is not better than another. This nation can no more escape moral degradation while it maintains wage-slavery than it could while it maintained chattel slavery. If chattel slavery, though defended as the great basis of our commercial system, and as ordained by God himself, undermined the foundations of justice, dulled the moral sense, produced a state of things in which it was possible for men and women to call evil good and good evil, sapped to call evil good and good evil, sapped the moral vitality and perverted the moral judgment of the nation and of most men and women in it, so must the maintenance of any sort of human slav-ery, though it be the basis of our com-mercial system today, be exactly as fatal.

Many Are Heedless.

"And yet, here you have a nation full of men and women who have not the slightest care or concern whether right or wrong prevails, so long as they indi-vidually secure a comfortable living. The same fruit must be gathered from this form of slavery as from the other. In-deed, the industrial slavery of today is incomparably more vicious and destruc-

"Think of the vision of John Brown at Charleston fifty years ago this wee Four millions of blacks were in slavery the South. The majority of the pulpits were silent on the subject of slavery or defending that institution. The well-to-do would not tolerate the prophets of a righteousness that touched the nerve of rotten cities and rotten government and rotten homes.

"The rottenness of New York, Chicago, San Francisco and a hundred other cities of America is so appalling today that it is a wonder that the indulgence and mercy of Almighty God has not been withdrawn long ago.

"Some of you young men are now, and within a very few years all of you will be shaping the destiny of not only civic but national government, and the destiny of this republic is in your keeping. It is a truism of history that civic virtue and national citizenship is no better nor higher than the individual citizenship of the community, or as each unit of society is high or low.

Jeffries-Johnson Fight.

"L see by your press that a number of your business men are reputed to have raised $100,000 to get a big double-fisted and in the prophets of a righteousness that touched the nerve of the procketbook. But there was one man whose whole life and mind were absorbed in one thought: 'Remembering them that are in bonds as bound with them.' This man made the cause of the slave the one burden and business of his life. For that cause be lived and in its behalf he died.

"I can think of many men and women who lived in this country fifty years ago and have no feeling that life is a divine or sacred thing. I cannot think of John Brown without knowing I have experienced a theophany. And if there is ever to dawn upon this old earth the advent of something worthy to be called man, or if the souls of men and women are to be inspired with the consciousness of a real religion, it will be because the qualities of character and the standards of moral measurement which appeared in John Brown become the possession of beings like you and me."

Herd of Cattle Will Be Killed at the State Prison and Sheep Will Be Inspected.

Dr. A. C. Young, state veterinarian, expects to be kept quite busy during the week attending to the many duties which have come to him in his department, in the way of inspections and other work. One of the duties he will have will be to dispose of the herd of cattle at the state prison, which was found to be infected with tuberculosis, when examined by one of the government inspectors and Dr. Young during the last week. There are twenty-two cattle to be killed, nearly the twenty-two cattle to be killed, nearly the entire herd at the prison, and the work will be done early this week.
